

OPEN STREAMS, MISUSE, AND CEO (COMBINED CASE) · SCRIPT B

Security gaps, misuse, and a CEO who attacks oversight

About 3.0 min at ~140 words/min · 418 words · Replace [Your Name]. Speak calmly. One speaker, one focus.

Tip: swap bracketed fields. Cite numbers carefully. End with the cancel / yearly-vote ask.

Mayor Crawford, members of City Council. My name is [Your Name], and I live in Crossville.

I want to start off discussing the security, or lack thereof, with these Flock cameras. Technologist Benn Jordan and researcher Jon Gaines found Flock Condor people-tracking cameras streaming live with no login. 404 Media verified about sixty feeds. Reporter Jason Koebler stood under a Condor in Bakersfield, CA, and watched himself on the open livestream. Jordan filmed himself on Peachtree Creek Greenway feeds that tracked him. Denver's 9NEWS and West Palm Beach's WFLX reported the company confirmed exposed police camera feeds. Flock called it a limited misconfiguration. Crossville should not trust a vendor that left live feeds on the open internet.

Next, we need to have a talk about accountability and transparency. Officers across the country have used Flock for personal stalking and curiosity searches, then lost jobs or faced charges. Recently in Milwaukee, WI, an officer searched a woman he was dating and her ex nearly one hundred eighty times, resigned, and pleaded guilty. An Internal Affairs detective who worked that case was later charged for personal Flock use and for secretly installing a GPS tracker. Georgia departments fired and charged officers in a summer wave of cases. Savannah put six employees on leave. Oak Ridge already proved it can happen in Tennessee. Cities from Huntington, WV, to Wichita, KS, also face lawsuits over these systems. The voters and taxpayers are going to be the ones paying out for these.

Lastly, we need to evaluate the leadership of Flock. CEO Garrett Langley told police clients they were under a "coordinated attack" from activists who want to "normalize lawlessness," and that public-records requests were being turned into a "weapon." In a Forbes interview, he also called people who map publicly visible cameras a "terroristic organization," closer to Antifa than to lawful advocacy. Staunton, VA, Police Chief Jim Williams rejected that story. He called resident questions "democracy in action". Staunton cancelled. The city said the CEO's narrative does not reflect its values.

Crossville does not need a local scandal to act.

THE ASK (say this)

My ask is clear. Cancel Crossville's Flock contract and remove the cameras. Require a public hearing and a recorded City Council vote before any surveillance equipment is ever proposed again. If you will not cancel yet, take a recorded yes-or-no vote each year before any renewal, with no automatic renewal that skips a public vote, and publish monthly use reports the public can check. Thank you. I yield.