Mayor Crawford, members of City Council. My name is [Your Name], and I live in Crossville.

These cameras do more than take a picture of a plate. They feed searchable travel history.

MaryvillePrivacy.org, citing East Tennessee police training records obtained through public records, describes Flock "Multi-Geo Search" and "Convoy Search", tools that track where a car went across cities and which vehicles moved together. That can sweep in families, coworkers, and church traffic with no warrant and no crime. ACLU analysis has warned about AI pattern tools that treat movement itself as suspicious. In 2024, a Norfolk, VA, circuit court ruled that when police use a dense citywide Flock camera network to pull a car's stored travel history without a warrant, that counts as a Fourth Amendment search, like tracking someone with a GPS device, and the judge blocked that evidence.

Crossville has not published whether "Multi-Geo" or "Convoy" are enabled, who can run them, or which partners can query local reads. Flock's product is built for multi-agency search. That means sharing across county lines by design, unless the city blocks it in writing, and even then residents cannot verify what they cannot see.

Please answer on the record: can a Crossville plate read be searched from outside Cumberland County today? If nobody in this room can say yes or no, this city is running a system it cannot explain. Regional tracking that residents cannot check should not continue without a warrant standard.

THE ASK (say this)

My ask is clear. Cancel Crossville's Flock contract and remove the cameras. Require a public hearing and a recorded City Council vote before any surveillance equipment is ever proposed again. If you will not cancel yet, take a recorded yes-or-no vote each year before any renewal, with no automatic renewal that skips a public vote, and publish monthly use reports the public can check. Thank you. I yield.
