

TAXPAYER LIABILITY FROM PLATE MISREADS · SCRIPT A

Misreads become million-dollar taxpayer problems

Mayor Crawford, members of City Council. My name is [Your Name], and I live in Crossville.

Please think about liability before you renew.

Automated plate readers misread plates. When officers treat a bad read as certain, families get guns drawn on them, get handcuffed, and get traumatized, and cities write settlement checks paid for by the taxpayers and voters. Aurora, Colorado paid about 1.9 million dollars after an ALPR-related wrongful stop. San Francisco, CA, paid about 495,000 dollars after another ALPR wrongful-stop case. Those were not Flock-branded products. They show what ALPR errors cost taxpayers.

Business Insider reported that Roseville, California police found Flock misread plates in about seventy-one percent of stolen or felony vehicle alerts in 2023 and 2024. Roseville said those incorrect alerts did not produce stops because officers verify first. Closer to home, Business Insider's police-records reporting describes a Morristown stop tied to a Flock alert after the system misread the letter O in a personalized plate as a zero, and matched it to a stolen plate. Tennessee hasn't had to endure a multimillion-dollar settlement yet. Not getting struck by lightning yet does not mean I should play a round of golf in the middle of a storm. Tennessee's retention law in the Tennessee Code Annotated only limits how long plate data may be stored. That is a storage cap, not a grant of immunity from federal civil-rights claims.

Crossville should not wait to be the next defendant. One bad stop can cost more than years of the camera budget. Other cities' settlements show what ALPR errors have already cost taxpayers elsewhere. Roseville shows how often Flock alerts can be wrong. Morristown is the warning when verification fails. Crossville should not wait to learn the same lesson until the settlement checks are being signed.

THE ASK (say this)

My ask is clear. Cancel Crossville's Flock contract and remove the cameras. Require a public hearing and a recorded City Council vote before any surveillance equipment is ever proposed again. If you will not cancel yet, take a recorded yes-or-no vote each year before any renewal, with no automatic renewal that skips a public vote, and publish monthly use reports the public can check. Thank you. I yield.
